

Another World in Production:

Garment Workers Speak Out

Stories of struggle and solidarity from garment workers and union leaders from around the world.

The University of Wisconsin – Madison recently pledged support for a new ‘Sweat-Free’ policy which mandates that a significant portion of UW apparel be produced in UNION factories that pay their workers a LIVABLE wage. Sweatshop workers throughout the world risk intimidation, termination, or even death to organize against oppressive factory conditions and for dignity and respect in the workplace. Another World in Production will give workers and union leaders from El Salvador, Mexico, and the Dominican Republic the opportunity to speak about their efforts to organize and to explain how we, as students, can use our purchasing power to act in solidarity with the workers that make our clothes.

Saturday, February 25, 2 P.M.
Morgridge Hall, 1100 Grainger

Sponsored by: Student Labor Action Coalition, Campus Women’s Center, Community Action on Latin America, ASM Diversity Committee, Industrial Workers of the World (Madison Chapter), Madison Fair Trade Action Alliance, Madison Arcatao Sister City Project, SEIU Local 1, Interfaith Coalition for Worker Justice - Worker Rights Center, UW-Madison Labor and Licensing Policy Committee

Conducted in Spanish with English translation